Uncle Zeke and Hulda

Visit the Stores

Fair is over, boarders are gone and the old farm has settled down again for the long evenings by the fireplace. Our grandchildren have their studies and Hulda is mighty handy when problems in arithmetic must be solved or the dinner pail filled the night before. With all of this on her shoulders, she just can't keep away from the village when the Tuesday visitation is due.

The weather is growing a bit kinky, so the forebanded wife raised the dust for Merchant's Store, looking up blankets. They were there, hundreds of 'em, in cotton, part wool and all fleece. He has cotton singles 66x76 inches for 49c apiece. Doubles are marked from 98c and up according to material and size. Just the thing to replace sheets that start shivers when one crawls in, or can be spread over the coverlet for extra warmth. A variety of colors and combinations will blend with any decoration scheme in the chambers.

At the L. F. Pike Co. fall and winter caps appealed to me, especially after the hints of winter thrown out the past week. Prices have not advanced because the stock was bought long before the sale and manufacturers started blowing up the price bag. Learning young fellers are friendly with the "crew neck" sweaters we bought one for the budding grandson, very collegiate for high school, you know. A stylish overcoat is proper now with very little advance at present.

A hot lobster stew for me and a real oyster stew for Hulda was our order at Ashton's Luncheonette. We looked over a new arrangement in the luncheonette for the disposal of steam while live green lobsters change in a presto fly trick to a red color, just prime for delicious sandwiches. Patrons with plenty of vim for cold drinks and ice cream can find a large variety to fit all tastes, at the fountain where Mrs. Martin, Miss Bernier or Roger Gates preside.

BIGGER AND BETTER BLUEBERRIES

From the Springfield Republican

Cultivated blueberries, "as large as a 10-cent piece, meaty, almost seedless, full-flavored, with a true blue color"—why not? An accomplished fact, indeed, rather than an interrogation point, according to the secretary of the department of agriculture in New Jersey, William B. Duryee. He adds this attractive decorative touch to the description: "The deep, blue underside is coated with a light frost-like iridescence or bloom." The superblueberry has arrived.

A New Jersey triumph from the beginning, although the blueberry of nature has favored New England as a habitat. The honor of original development goes to Miss Elizabeth C. White of Whitesbog, N. J., who began her work twenty years ago and later had the help of the scientists of the State's agricultural department. The method was simple: Promising native parent bushes were first collected. These were cross-pollinated; then followed careful selections and rejections and finally there was solved the problem of propagation.

Superblueberries with the circumference of olives must have a future, even apart from blueberry cake, blueberry shortcake and blueberry pie. With no loss of flavor or meatiness, almost seedless and more lovely to look at, compared with "natives" they will stand without cooking as never before—rivaling in this respect the peach and the plum.

Can nature be improved upon? Again, the superblueberry is the answer. Nature has been and can be improved upon by man in numberless ways. Improving him himself is the toughest problem.

TWIN TOWN NATURE CLUB Observed Tenth Anniversary

The Twin Town Nature Club celebrated their tenth anniversary with a banquet in the Baptist vestry, Monday, Sept. 18. The tables were decorated with beautiful dahlias and asters. Vice President Philip Stone, acted as toastmaster during the following program:

Music—Records of two fundings and names of charter members read.

Historical Notes—Mrs. Agnes Morton Toole to Our Club.

Past—Mrs. Marguerite Heald.

Present—C. G. Morton.

Music—Visitors to Soume Study, George Howe Original Poem—Mrs. Hortense Gates.

Music—Mrs. Heald in her response to the Past of the Club, mentioned the giving of National Geographic to the two high schools for the last seven years, of buying five trees in Grand Lake State Park, at the time that was saved from the woodman's axe; of sending money to Romania for an Animal Rescue League in which Frances Moore Chapman, formerly of Norway, was interested; finally, of the activities of the Club members in arousing interest in saving one of Norway's beauty spots, Ordway Grove, and of Don Seitz's generosity.

Mr. Colby emphasized the fact that he always learned something of interest at every club meeting he attended.

Mr. Morton's view of the future was a club house with huge fireplace at the Grove.

A beautiful birthday cake with ten candles on it, made by Mrs. Katherine Morrill, was sent to A. D. Park, who has been president of the club all of its ten years of organization.

The following poems are of interest:

Original Poem

Ten glad years since our first journey
Down the trails of Nature Lore,
Ten years, friends, we've been together,
And the way lies bright before.
Fairer far than worlds of Magic
That our childhood fancy knew,
Have we found this World of Nature,
With its wonders really true.
Starry heavens, and sea, and mountain,
Birds, and trees, and flower, and fern,
Each has given to us its message,
Yet we still have much to learn.
To those who sought a deeper knowledge
There has come a great reward,
But we all have learned some lesson
From these myriad worlds of God.
And we all have gained one treasure,
Living with the birds and flowers,
Something we may hold forever—
"The friendship that is ours!"
Every birdnote sings more sweetly,
Every flower blooms more true,
Every sunset seems more radiant,
When we can see beauty through
Mother Nature's voice is calling,
Calling us to little children
Thru with beauty of little children
Let us gather 'round her knee."
—Hortense Gates (Geggs) Gates.
Sept. 18, 1933.

Historical Notes

On September four, nineteen twenty-three, thirteen people met and did agree to organize a club, and then and there decided South Paris and Norway should equal share.

The meeting was held with Miss Flora Mearns, well known for ability in Nature to search and find the energy, vine and petal. That the project progressed step by step.

At the second meeting held September eighteen the constitution was adopted, and well can be seen.

The names they selected that night long ago fit to a T for we all well know
That the "Twin Town Nature Club"
With charter members thirty-nine
Has proven to be an ideal club,
With aspirations divine.

For nature means the aggregate
Of existing things, sort, size and shape,
The study of which is educational,
In fact, essential, to every mind.
And combined with the study of flowers and birds,
Many gatherings here and there
Have been held in hospitable Twin Town homes
Each willing to do their share.

In preparing programs, instructive and pat,
Always pleasing to the eye and all,
At the class of which we generally smiled
When hearing the refreshment talk.

Annual picnic held at East Summit,
With Mr. and Mrs. Robinson and Mrs. Ella Heald.

Are always anticipated with pleasure,
For all know dinners in the field
Comprise besides our special lunches
Which we carry in our hands.

Baked beans served by our dear sister
While the other ladies play to hostess hand!
And we do not forget Mr. Stearns on the Hill
Whose invitation to visit him always causes a thrill.

For we all know when we get up there
He will serve ice cream with syrup to spare!
Picnic parties at Lake Keweenaw Island
At Whitney Pond and Oxford, too.

Have been reported in the minutes,
Also come under a foot.
At Lake Penesseewassee one night was spent
And one day at Concord Pond.

Where all nature lovers smiled
In sympathy's sweet bond.

Once upon a time, as the records show,
Like from "who" and "where" and "when" and "how"
All started for Freeport to visit "Early Inn"
But several got lost! And after wandering
While the other ladies play to hostess hand!

And we do not forget Mr. Stearns on the Hill
Whose invitation to visit him always causes a thrill.
